Hi, Elise. Sorry to bother you, but when Kali was unwrapping her presents last night, there were two without cards or tags (probably lost in transit!!). We narrowed it down to Laura and Sofi. So that we can get the thank you notes correct, did Laura give Kali a Skipper doll or a bath set in a blue bag? Thanks for your help.

P.S.- We ended up selling 131 boxes at the booth on Saturday.

repletion \rih-PLEE-shun\, noun: 1. The condition of being completely filled or supplied. 2. Excessive fullness, as from overeating.

He lay like a filthy leech, exhausted with his repletion. --Jeff Guinn, "The Ghoul, the Bad, the Ugly," [3]Arizona Republic, June 7, 1999

Word of the Day for Thursday October 18, 2001:

serendipity \sehr-uhn-DIP-uh-tee\, noun: The faculty or phenomenon of making fortunate accidental discoveries.

Still, I was more subject to serendipity than I yet knew. Soon risk, chance, and a letter from Sir Alun Reese-Jones, the Master of Trinity, my college at Cambridge, were to set my life on an adventurous course. --David Freeman, One of Us

Yet even as I planned a rough route, leaving plenty of room for serendipity, I was uncomfortably aware that journeys have a way of creating their own momentum. --Lesley Hazleton, [1]Driving To Detroit: An Automotive Odyssey

There again, perhaps because of serendipity, or an especially conscientious team of doctors, it can also happen that the crucial clues are noticed and recorded for posterity. --Edward Hooper, [2]The River: A Journey to the Source of HIV and

AIDS

The word serendipity was formed by English author Horace Walpole (1717-1797) from Serendip (also Serendib), an old name for Sri Lanka, in reference to a Persian tale, The Three Princes of Serendip, whose heroes "discovered, quite unexpectedly, great and wonderful good in the most unlikely of situations, places and people."

Serendipitous describes that which is obtained or characterized by serendipity.

Word of the Day for Tuesday October 16, 2001:

panjandrum \pan-JAN-druhm\, noun: An important personage or pretentious official.

Needless to say, when governors and ministers and the panjandrums of British public life asked these appointed advisers and those from whose ranks they were largely drawn for their views on democratic development, they gave the answers that might have been expected. --Christopher Patten, East and West

And so I have appointed myself the chairman, High Panjandrum, Grand Inquisitor--and sole member--of a grievance committee of my own making. --Alan K. Simpson, [1]Right in the Old Gazoo

Panjandrum was coined by Samuel Foote (1720-1777) in a piece of nonsense writing:

So she went into the garden to cut a cabbage-leaf to make an apple-pie; and at the same time a great she-bear, coming up the street, pops its head into the shop. "What! No soap?" So he died, and she very imprudently married the barber: and there were present the Picninnies, and the Joblillies, and the Garyulies, and the grand Panjandrum himself, with the little round button at top, and they all fell to playing the game of catch-as-catch-can till the gunpowder ran out at the heels of their boots.

It was composed on the spot to challenge actor Charles Macklin's claim that he could memorize anything. Macklin is said to have refused to repeat a word of it.

Word of the Day for Friday October 19, 2001:

extemporaneous \ek-stem-puh-RAY-nee-us\, adjective: 1. Composed, performed, or uttered on the spur of the moment, or without previous study; unpremeditated; impromptu. 2. Prepared beforehand but delivered without notes or text. 3. Skilled at or given to extemporaneous speech. 4. Provided, made, or put to use as an expedient; makeshift.

. . . the intimate goofiness of an extemporaneous story told to a child. --Barbara Tritel, "What the Wicked Magician Did," [1]New York Times, February 22, 1987

She summed up the long and complex sessions in an hour's extemporaneous speech that was remarkable for its organization, pithiness and coherence. --"Anna Freud, Psychoanalyst, Dies in London at 86," [2]New York Times, October 10, 1982

In fact, his particular strength may well have been improvisation, and he may not have been interested in committing the results of his extemporaneous performances to paper. --Christoph Wolff, [3]Johann Sebastian Bach: The Learned Musician

Extemporaneous comes from Late Latin extemporaneus, from Latin ex tempore, "out of time," therefore "immediately, at the very time the occasion arises." It is related to temporary, "lasting for a limited time"; contemporary, "belonging to the same time" (con-, "with, together"); and tempo, "the rate or degree of movement in time."

Just want you to know I received and checked your paperwork.? It's nice to get a head start on things, thanks!?! I did not find a T5 - which is OK as long as you hadn't turned one in with cash and I missed it. ? I did make a minor adjustment which you'll need to know about when distributing the recognitions.? The donated box of cookies had to be to be assigned to a girl, so I gave it to Kendra Muecke.? She originally sold 49, and with the extra box, she is at the level to receive the patch and face stickers. You'll get the extra patch and stickers kit with your stuff in May. Julie-

I left my paperwork in the green box at your doorstep yesterday.? I wanted to make sure you received it.? I'll be out of town until March 25, so if you have any questions, I won't be able to respond until then.

Thanks,

Susan, I just spoke to Alejandra. They will be putting this in the system as an annuity to be settled by Financial Settlements. I will forward the invoice to them.

Laurie-

No. I have not put a new ticket in the system. I wrote up a paper ticket and Alejandra Chavez adjusted the term of the existing sitara ticket. I'm not sure how it is supposed to be handled. You might check with Alejandra and Kam Keiser. Apparently, we've had some similar deals with other counterparties. The NYMEX desk people told me that Credit doesn't want us paying one lump sum for unwinds. Do you have any instructions concerning this, given our current financial situation??

Thanks,

Susan Pereira

Susan, I just got an invoice from Superior for the unwinding of the Sonat trigger deal. The invoice covers production months 12/01 through 08/02 and is for $3,761,900.00. Have you put something in the system for this?
